

Abstract of the Disclosure

Admissions processing and management is enabled through an automated submission, management, notification and status indication system in accordance with the present invention. The present invention provides an applicant component enabling applicants to submit an application for admission and receive status information about their application. The present invention further provides a management component for personalizing communications, scheduling interviews and on-site visits, and categorizing, assigning and evaluating the application. The present invention further provides a communications component for notifying admissions office personnel of assigned applications and allowing applicants to view the application status. The present invention can integrate with previously established interfaces and databases, and can be customized for specific user needs.

15

20 968614.07